Big miss on ER wait targets

Health. 8-hour mark often not met, but doctor says he doesn't look at the numbers

Edmonton emergency departments have fallen far short of hitting targets created by the government to ensure patients are being treated and moved within eight hours.

New data shows that the length-of-stay targets created by the province in 2010 wanted to have 75 per cent of patients checked into emergency departments, assessed, treated and stabilized and admitted within eight hours by 2013.

That target was upped to 90 per cent by March 2015.

Yet at the start of the month, Edmonton hospitals weren't even close to the 2013 targets, let alone the ones for 2015.

Of the 122 admitted patients at Edmonton's Grey Nuns Hospital between March 1 and 7, only 19 per cent of those were seen within eight hours.

The centre also missed the target of having 90 per cent of discharged patients sent on their way within four hours — just 57 per cent were.

Stollery Children's Hospital, meanwhile, only admitted 25 per cent of patients within eight hours last week and Royal Alexandra only admitted 34 per cent.

For emergency department physician Bill Sevcik, the targets are simply unattainable. Working at both the Uni-

Working at both the University of Alberta and Stollery, Sevik said care providers are focused on the flow of resources so the sickest patients can be seen first, rather than hitting the eight-hour target.

"Quite frankly, as a frontline provider, we are trying to do our best for all of our patients," he said. "We don't look at those numbers."

Steve Buick, spokesperson for Health Minister Stephen Mandel, said the province is fully committed to hitting those targets, but it won't happen overnight.

"We need to do better in emergency and we are investing a tremendous amount of resources to unblock the system," he said in reference to $50 million committed by Mandel to update emergency departments in Edmonton and Calgary. LEAH HOLOIDAY/METRO

Reimagine Yeg: Downtown spots go from drab to fab

Development.

Students hope to give overlooked spaces new lease on life

For 12 often-overlooked spaces in downtown Edmonton, the difference between being drab and fab could be as simple as offering a place for people to take a seat or a splash of colour on an empty wall.

That's the thinking behind a project launched by three University of Alberta students who are hoping to give a "design" intervention to downtown spots often unnoticed by people passing by.

Partnering with the City of Edmonton's Urban Design Unit, the Reimagine Yeg project has identified 12 spaces in downtown and created a platform for both designers to pitch creative facelifts and for people to vote on their favourites.

Project organizer and U of A Planning student Bryce Schmode said the entire initiative is about offering spots with great potential a chance to become something more.

"Our hope is these places could be focal points, something people are attracted to and can hang out," he said. "Right now we have all of these spaces that are underutilized."

Melcor Alley, NorQuest College, The Westin and Edmonton Welcome Centre are just a few of the spots identified by the group in need of a sprucing up.

With 40 designs now submitted by U of A students and local design firms, Schmode said it's up to residents to chose their favourite update. Once a winner is chosen, the group plans to connect designers with businesses and grant funding to turn their vision into a reality.

David Holdsworth of the city's Urban Design Unit said not only does Reimagine Yeg give students a practical lesson in planning with purpose, but it develops a policy on design intervention moving forward.

Third of Albertans sit for hours a day: Survey

If you're at your desk while reading this, there's bad news: You're probably sitting too much.

According to a new survey out of the University of Alberta, a third of Albertans sit for 10 hours or more each day and, surprisingly, it's the 18-34 age group (full-time workers and students) that spends the most time in sedentary positions.

"We used to have to get up to answer the phone or change a channel. Society has done a disservice by computerizing everything, but there are things we can do," said Nora Johnston, director of the Alberta Centre for Active Living, which just published the 2015 Alberta Survey on Physical Activity.

As physical inactivity is a risk factor for cardiovascular disease, stroke, diabetes and depression, the survey recommends active transport, leisure and workplace practices (walking, cycling and using stairs).

Stantec, a leader in workplace wellness, provides shower facilities, bike racks and pedometers that encourage workers to earn activity "With the new building in downtown Edmonton, we'll meet activity needs better than ever — sit/stand work stations, access to natural light and lounge areas with bar height tables, circular couches and WiFi — we want to find ways to encourage employees to get up from their desk," said Stantec facility manager Jackie Castro. NDP calls for special prosecutor over Tory nomination allegations

Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Supporter of taxi representative calls for a new race amid PC controversy

NDP leader Rachel Notley called for the justice minister to appoint a special prosecutor Thursday, as the Progressive Conservative party continues to review claims of nomination irregularities in an Edmonton constituency.

Metro was first to report Wednesday the party was looking into the nomination process in Edmonton-Ellersia amid allegations the incumbent MIA Naresh Bhardwaj attempted to mislead a challenger's supporters and offered a $10,000 bribe to one through a proxy in order to undermine the challenger's campaign. These allegations haven't been proven.

Bhardwaj won the party's Ellerslie nomination contest on Feb. 21 after his lone challenger Balraj Manhas, a prominent figure in the city's taxi industry, withdrew from the race.

Notley said allegations this serious against a sitting MLA bear further investigation.

"Somebody running around, making allegations of criminal activity is a little bit more than an internal party matter," she said.

Tory House Leader and Justice Minister Jonathan Denis conceded during Question Period in the legislature Thursday that the allegations are serious, but added, "They are just that — allegations. They have not been proven. It's not appropriate to be commenting based on speculation."

Notley said the minister doesn't seem to get it and added the premier should have Bhardwaj resign from cabinet in the meantime.

Metro attempted to contact Premier Jim Prentice on Thursday, but he was unavailable.

Meanwhile, Metro was also provided with photos of what appeared to be the official nomination papers for Manhas. They appear to be complete with 30 names, addresses, PC party membership numbers and signatures. Metro has not independently verified the information on the nomination papers.

The allegations from two people on the list who swore statutory declarations indicate that Bhardwaj or others working on his behalf tried to get the two supporters to sign affidavits saying their names had improperly appeared on Manhas' nomination papers in a bid to have them tossed out.

Manhas has said he received a call from party officials days before the Ellerslie vote and was told to withdraw from the race or be publicly disqualified over concerns with his papers. He agreed to take his name off the ballot but said he was assured of an investigation.

Some of the 30 supporters of Manhas said they weren't aware of the allegations until they read the news Thursday, but it sparked fears both that their voice wasn't being heard and their privacy had been breached.

A PC party source confirmed nomination papers are supposed to be held secret and one supporter, Avatar Chahil, said he was concerned that others had obtained his personal information, as well as that of two of his brothers and a niece who endorsed Manhas.

As well, Chahil told Metro his family was "definitely disappointed" that Manhas never made it to voting day. He said concerns over the process should be enough to prompt a redo.

"Somebody's screwed up somewhere," he said. "They should do the nomination again or do something else again, because then it would be fair for everyone."

Wildrose party house leader to resign, quit politics

The number of incumbent Wildrose politicians who will be running in what many expect will be a spring election has dropped to three after house leader Shayne Saskiw announced Thursday that he is leaving politics.

Saskiw, 33, said he will not seek re-election in his constituency of Lac La BicheSt. Paul-Two Hills, but will stay on for now.

"You just become a bit disillusioned with politics altogether," Saskiw said, referring particularly to 11 former Wildrose colleagues who crossed the floor late last year to join Premier Jim Prentice and the Progressive Conservatives.

"One day, individuals are

"You're going to see a centre-of-the-road budget despite all of the tough talk."

Shayne Saskiw

talking about keeping taxes low, not going into debt, and the next day they're saying the complete opposite," said Saskiw.

"Now is the time to push for a model that pressures politicians to keep their word and their promises, and that to me is outside of the traditional party model."

Saskiw is in his first term as a member of the legislature after defeating PC cabinet minister Ray Danyluk by a tight margin in the 2012 election.

Saskiw said he has found the legislature to be a "flawed model" for getting things done. Partisan fighting among parties prevents valuable collaborative work on legislation, he suggested. And true change is blunted when politicians arrive promising bold change, but instead only craft minor policy alterations to remain popular.

"I see a fair amount of people who are just in it for a job and a paycheque."

5 Days. Camp-out for the homeless teaches students how it feels to rely on strangers

LEAH HOLOIDAY

With little more than a change of clothes and a sleeping bag, eight University of Alberta students braved the somewhat unseasonable weather to raise cash and awareness for the city's homeless.

As part of the 5 Days for the Homeless initiative — a five-night camp-out now in its 10th year — U of A business student Oliver Philipp hoped he could shed light on what it's like to live without the guarantee of a roof over your head.

"For me, it's (had) a direct impact on students," said Philipp, 21, on Thursday. "So many students are so fortunate. Maybe you'll have an exam that gets you down, or just little things that you think are just the end of the world.

"You kind of forget how lucky you are just to have a roof above your head."

With a goal of raising $70,000 for Youth Empowerment and Support Services, the students have spent their days and nights on campus, eating only what's been donated by passersby or brought to them by their families.

Philipp said participants didn't know what to expect on their first night. Four days and nights in, Philipp said they have a better sense of how dependent they are on the generosity of others.

"It's incredible not having the autonomy to go yourself ... and get a sandwich, or go and get some food, but waiting for it to come," he said.

"It's a very interesting feeling; it's strange and somehow I'm getting used to that feeling"

Infrastructure. Bridge project moving forward

The city plans to swing seven massive steel girders into place this weekend, as work toward completing the 102 Avenue Bridge over Groat Road continues.

"We're approaching a very significant milestone, completing the girder installation," said special projects manager Allan Bartman.

The installation will force the closure of Groat Road starting on Friday evening at 7:30 p.m. and the city hopes to have traffic flowing again on Monday, but it will depend on how the progress goes.

"The plan is to keep Groat Road closed until we have all the girders up," said Bartman.

"The start, moving into the tight turns, is going to be the most challenging," he said.

Temperatures are expected to soar this weekend. During a tour of the track on Thursday afternoon, large puddles had formed in some parts of the course.

Web security. EPS uses fairy tale analogy to alert young Edmontonians to fraud and identity theft

LUCY HAINES

Edmonton police used the moral of a fairy tale to remind Edmonton students that online crimes of identity theft and fraud are like the story's wolf preying on a trusting Little Reď Riďing Hood.

"It's never too young to start the conversation with our kids about how to safely use technology," said EPS Const. Derek Onysko, reading to a group of schoolchildren Thursday.

"We want kids to be cautious when photo-sharing or posting personal details on Facebook. We'd all like to believe everyone has good intentions, but they don't.'

Det. Patti Nichol of the EPS economic crimes section said phishing sees fraudsters using counterfeit emails and websites to lure people of all ages to give out personal or financial information.

In Edmonton, identity theft and fraud are on the rise, up 86 per cent and 25 per cent, respectively, from 2013 to 2014.

"People feel comfortable in front of their computer screen, but visiting unsecured sites or giving out personal details is like having a stadium full of people standing over your shoulder, watching everything you do,' said Nichol.

EPS has online safety videos for youth, and encourages anyone who thinks they are the victim of identity theft to report it to 780-423-

Distracted driving fines for cyclists too if private member's bill passes

Safety. Proposed bill cracking down on people using phones

STEPHANIE DUBOIS stephanie.dubois@metronews.ca

Cyclists in the city could be facing fines similar to those drivers might face if a private member's bill is approved next week.

Bill 204, a private member's bill introduced by Calgary MLA Moe Amery, would see a distracted driving ticket come with three demerit points and also raise the fine to $250. But Amery said details on how the bill will affect cyclists haven't been hammered out yet.

"Right now we are focusing on drivers who drive trucks, cars and buses because we want Alberta roads to be safe," he said.

The current distracted driving law does include cyclists whose bicycles are defined as vehicles under the Traffic Safety Act.

"The whole idea of the bill is to prevent people from using their phones," said Amery.

The current fine if caught is $172 for distracted driving, but Alberta is one of the last provinces to incorporate the loss of demerit points with its distracted driving law.

The issue of fining cyclists is something Edmonton Police chief Rod Knecht told media Friday isn't the focus of police efforts to crack down on pre-occupied drivers.

"Right now we're talking about a big chunk of metal going down the road and that can cause serious injury. I don't think Albertans are ready to have law after law after law," he said.

"I don't think we want to legislate every bit of behavior for people."

Conrad Nobert, member of the Edmonton Bike Coalition, said the need to have enforcement for cyclists is there, despite him personally never seeing a cyclist riding while using their cell phone.

"Now we only have legislation that covers vehicles, we don't have special transportation legislation for bicycles. Given that, I think they need to include cyclists in this.

"Otherwise, what happens if a cyclist does cause a serious accident of some kind because they're distracted?" he said.

Knecht welcomes province's move on distracted driving

Edmonton police Chief Rod Knecht applauded the provincial government for pushing forward with distracted driving legislation Thursday.

Justice minister Jonathan Denis announced Wednesday that he would support the private member's bill that would raise the current fine to $250 and add three demerits.

Knecht said it's time for Alberta to embrace higher penalties.

"You're seeing provinces right across the country take this much more seriously," he said.

He said almost since the law's inception police were seeing that the fine, with no demerits was not having an impact on drivers.

"Writing tickets was not having the impact and we saw the numbers increase," he said.

"The biggest concern was young people, particularly your 16- to 18-year-old who is technically savvy and wants to be on that device."

In 2012, the first full year of the law, Knecht said there were 4,597 tickets and in 2014 there were 5,284 tickets. He said too many people view the current tickets as simply the cost of doing business, but losing their license is a risk they won't be willing to take.

"I believe demerits will make the difference. It will be interesting to see and follow this," he said. "People may not pay attention to the money, but they will pay attention to the demerits."

Critics fear new anti-terror bill will tread on rights

The federal government's assurances that its anti-terrorism bill will not be a licence to spy on activists have done little to calm the fears of aboriginal leaders, environmentalists and human-rights advocates.

Several critics said Thursday they have reason to believe the legislation would be used to step up surveillance of protesters opposed to petroleum projects and other resource developments.

"We don't want to be labelled as terrorists in our own territories, our own homelands, for standing up to protect the land and waters," Assembly of First Nations national chief Perry Bellegarde told the House of Commons public-safety committee.

Bellegarde indicated the bill would be challenged in the courts, saying the federal government did not fulfil its duty to consult aboriginal peoples.

The committee plans to hear more than 50 witnesses on the bill, introduced in response to extremist-inspired attacks that killed two Canadian soldiers last October.

The legislation would give the Canadian Security Intelligence Service the ability to actively disrupt terror plots, make it easier for police to limit the movements of a suspect, expand no-fly list powers and take aim at terrorist propaganda.

In addition, the bill would relax the sharing of federally held information about activity that "undermines the security of Canada."

Neither the new disruptive powers nor the informationsharing provisions apply to "lawful" advocacy, protest or dissent, but some fear the bill could be used against activists who demonstrate without an official permit or despite a court order. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Calgary woman dies when whale slams boat in Mexico

Cabo San Lucas.

Captain was forced to make a 'sudden manoeuvre'

It was an adventure tour turned tragic.

A Calgary woman killed Wednesday off the coast of Cabo San Lucas in Mexico after a grey whale crashed into a tourist boat has been identified as Jen Karren.

Cabo Adventure, the company behind the Snorkel & Sea Adventure tour that Karren was on, said the 35-year-old woman was killed after a whale broke the water's surface, causing the boat's captain to make a "sudden manoeuvre."

"The whale hit the boat on one side, which caused two passengers to be hurt and unfortunately the death of one passenger," said Felipe DiezCanedo, general director of Cabo Adventures.

It appears the force of the impact sent Karren into the water, with a guide and a second passenger managing to get her back on the boat, where a third passenger performed CPR.

"On arrival to the marina, the paramedics took the passenger to a private hospital where, unfortunately, (she) passed away," Diez-Canedo said

Karren's employer, construction consulting firm WorleyParsons, issued a statement saying she was a "friendly teammate who was willing to help out wherever she could."

The statement explained that Karren had worked for the company for six years and was a member of its Office Services team in Calgary and "always spoke kindly of everyone with whom she came in contact."

Two others were hurt during the incident, but their injuries were not life-threatening. With files from Jeremy Nolais and Darren Krause

Beloved author to be honoured

Montreal. Mordecai Richler was best known for such novels as The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz Denis Mayor Montreal Coderre unveiled a tribute to one of Canada's most celebrated authors Thursday at city hall.

Mordecai Richler was born in the city in 1931 and died at the age of 70 in 2001.

He was best known for such novels as The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz and Barney's Version, both of which were set in Montreal and made into feature films.

In 2011, the city announced plans to revamp a bandstand built in the 1920s on the eastern flank of Mount Royal and rename it the Mordecai Richler Gazebo.

However, work on the gazebo was delayed several

In January, the delays prompted Richler's widow, Florence, to say she doubted the city would ever honour her late husband.

the 1950s for Europe but returned 20 years later and his city of birth often figured as settings for his writing.

Two Ferguson officers shot; groups try to quell tensions

Missouri. Bloodshed threatened to inflame the already fraught relationship between police and protesters

With measured remarks and a conciliatory tone, police, political leaders and civil-rights activists on Thursday sought to tamp down tensions after two police officers were shot in front of the Ferguson Police Department during a protest.

The officers were quickly released from the hospital, but St. Louis County Police Chief Jon Belmar said they could have easily been killed and called the attack "an ambush." Meanwhile, people were taken in for questioning after a SWAT team converged on a Ferguson home near the shooting site. Police did not immediately offer details.

The shootings marked the first time in eight months of tension in Ferguson that officers were shot at a protest, and the bloodshed threatened to inflame the already fraught relationship between police and protesters just as the city seeks reforms in the wake of a withering Justice Department report on its law-enforcement practices.

The attack resonated all the way to Washington. President Barack Obama took to Twitter to relay his prayers to the officers and to denounce violence against police as unacceptable. "Path to justice is one all of us must travel together," Obama wrote, signing the tweet with his initials to indicate the president personally composed it.

Attorney General Eric Holder called the shooting "inexcusable and repugnant."

The shots were fired early Thursday just as a small crowd of protesters began to break up after a demonstration that unfolded hours after the resignation of Ferguson Police Chief Tom Jackson.

The shots were believed to come from a handgun fired across the street from the police department, which has been a national focal point since the Aug. 9 shooting death of Michael Brown, who was black and unarmed, by a white police officer. The associated press

Atlanta. Residents call for police accountability

Residents in the Atlanta area are adding their voices to a nationwide chorus of calls for increased police accountability after an unarmed, naked man was fatally shot by an officer responding to a complaint of a suspicious person at an apartment complex.

More than 100 protesters gathered in the city of Decatur on Wednesday night to protest the death of Anthony Hill, 27. Most said they hoped the latest shooting would become part of an ongoing national discussion on how police officers interact with citizens, especially minorities.

The relationship between law enforcement and civilians — particularly in poor, minority and high-crime neighbourhoods — has become a contentious issue in many states across the U.S. following the high-profile deaths of unarmed men and teens by police officers, some of whom have been exonerated of wrongdoing after saying they perceived the men and teens they shot as threats. Shooting

Report forthcoming

Wisconsin's attorney general says a report on the shooting of an unarmed 19-year-old man by a Madison police officer should be sent to a prosecutor in about two weeks. Attorney General Brad Schimel is updating the investigation into the death of Tony Robinson. Robinson, a biracial man, was shot and killed by a white officer Friday night after police said Robinson assaulted the officer. Schimel is encouraging the public to be patient before judging what happened. He says he appreciates that Robinson's family has urged that protests be peaceful. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Malaysia vows stern action if air traffic controller was sleeping

Malaysia's transport minister on Thursday vowed to take stern action against an air traffic control supervisor if it is confirmed that he was asleep on the job when Malaysia Airlines Flight 370 disappeared a year ago.

An interim investigation report last Sunday contained transcripts of conversations between air traffic controllers and the airline that revealed confusion after the Boeing 777 dropped off radar with 239 people aboard while flying from Kuala Lumpur to Beijing. The last voice contact

The last voice contact was a "good night" message from the cockpit to the controllers at 1:19 a.m. on March 8. The shutdown of the transponder one minute later removed the plane's identification from commercial radar.

Bangladesh factory roof collapse traps dozens

The roof of a five-storey cement factory under construction in Bangladesh collapsed Thursday, killing at least four workers and trapping many others, an official said.

About 150 workers were on duty when the collapse occurred in Mongla in Bagerhat district, fire official Mizanur Rahman said. He said at least 40 people were rescued from under the debris and up to 40 others were feared trapped. Many of the survivors were hospitalized with injuries, Rahman said. The cause of the collapse was still under investigation.

Survivors said 50 to 60 people were working on the roof while others were on the ground floor when the collapse occurred, said local government administrator M. Jahangir Alam.

It was not clear how many were directly affected by the collapse.

The seaside factory, about 135 kilometres southwest of Dhaka, is owned by an army welfare organization, the United News of Bangladesh news agency reported.

CRTC shakes up TV's Canadian content

Broadcast. Regulator hopes changes will lead to higher quality Canadian programming

Canadian broadcasters will have less-stringent Canadian content requirements, but be required to fund higher-quality homegrown productions as a result of the findings of the CRTC's Let Talk TV public hearings.

Jean-Pierre Blais, chairman of the CRTC, outlined changes intended to develop better Canadian programming Thursday in Ottawa.

Canadian content restrictions will be relaxed, except in the prime-time viewing window (6 to 11 p.m.). Specialty channels will have to show 35 per cent Canadian programming throughout their schedules, and some local stations will not have to have any CanCon in non-prime time viewing slots.

Specialty channels like HGTV, Space and MTV Canada which have had genre protection to limit competition — but also license requirements that limited what kind of content they could show — will see those restrictions lifted.

All Canadian broadcasters will have to invest in homegrown production, and there are changes to productions being labelled Canadian content. One pilot project will encourage adaptations of Canadian novels, and another will focus on series with a $2 million budget per hour, but both will require a Canadian screenwriter, leading actor or production company to qualify as Canadian content.

VOICES

WE NEED TO STOP ABSORBING THIS COST

When I was in university, I used to steal from people.

Before you call the cops, it wasn't anything crazy; no laptops or jewelry, liquor or cash. No, when I was in university, I used to steal tampons from people's bathrooms. If I was at a party or a friend's house, I'd inspect their feminine product supply and if it was robust, I'd take a few and put them in my purse. I wasn't a kleptomaniac or a bad person, I was just a woman who was broke and bleeding.

Feminine products are an essential part of living in modernday society. They're expensive to begin with; why are we taxed on them, too?

Before I lose half my audience, let me put this in universal terms: Did you know that you're paying tax every time you go to the bathroom? Eww, what? Yes, because toilet paper is taxed, so with each wipe (remember, front to back) the government gets richer.

If you agree that that's gross and unfair, would you also agree it's unfair that people who menstruate pay a tax on tampons and all other feminine products? Every time we shed the stuff that lines our uterine walls, the government further lines its pockets. Talk about blood money!

There's a petition at Change.org, "Government of Canada — No Tax on Tampons" that's trying to put a stop to this, and you should sign it. Now, before you say, "This isn't my problem because I have a penis," stop and think about how you came to be on Earth. Did a stork bring you here? Were you deposited on the shores via giant shell like

If the answer to both of those questions is 'No,' then I'm sorry, but this IS your problem because that means you came from a womb

Once a month, the female reproductive system does something that's integral to keeping the human race on Earth and we're taxed on it.

Tampon tax

Feminine products are already expensive; putting a tax on them adds insult to what kind of looks like an injury.

The petition estimates that Canadians paid the government more than $36 million in tax on tampons. This is a cost we shouldn't be willing to absorb.

Canadians don't pay tax on everything. For instance, some foods and medical supplies are tax exempt, while luxury and cosmetic items are not. Sounds good on paper, but when you break it down, priorities start looking crooked. According to the federal government's Excise Tax Act, schedule VI, feminine products fall under the "cosmetic" category while cocktail cherries fall under "food." Okay, while it's true that cocktail cherries are edible, are they really crucial to human existence? In fact, aren't they just a "cosmetic" addition to a piña colada?

Moreover, if tampons are a "cosmetic" item, who does that serve? I guess tampons could be considered cosmetic in that they kind of cover up a woman's period.

That's nice for women, but it (also) makes life cleaner and less bloody for men, too.

How would our boyfriends/husbands like it if "the rag" wasn't just an expression? What if we used J-Cloths that we washed and hung around the house to dry?

Trust me, tampons and other feminine hygiene products improve everyone's life.

Feminine products are already expensive; putting a tax on them adds insult to what kind of looks like an injury.

If you're still wondering why you should care about this, think back to my tax on toilet paper example — is a square of two-ply really a "luxury"? Well, maybe Charmin is — so soft!

Jump on this No Tax on Tampons petition and should it succeed, use it as a way to get the tax off the T.P., too! We all wipe and we all need uteruses, whether they're in your body or someone else's.

Happy face/Sad face

From spitting to swearing, Metro weighs in on the news that made headlines this week:

HORKING HOCKEY PLAYERS

A hockey arena in Terrace, B.C., has cancelled drop-in adult games for the rest of the season because some players refused to stop spitting in the penalty box and on the benches. Parents whose kids play at the arena were grossed out and complained.

Kudos to activists for successfully petitioning Facebook to remove the feeling "fat" option from its dropdown menu, and a pat on the back to the all-powerful corporation for listening to the plebs. Hopefully newsfeeds everywhere will also see a decrease in "thinspiration" photos, itemized lists of everything a friend ate that day and, it almost goes without saying, instagrammed dinner shots.

WHAT NOT TO WEAR: PMO EDITION

Our dear leader is facing some major backlash over comments he made about face coverings. Prime Minister Stephen Harper said that "most Canadians" find wearing a face veil during citizenship ceremonies to be "offensive" and added that the niqab is "rooted in a culture that is antiwomen." Hey, Harper: If you think Muslim women shouldn't be told what to wear than maybe you should, y'know, not tell them what to wear.

SOMETHING TO SMILE ABOUT: SET FOR LIFE

A small-town Nova Scotia man who just won Atlantic Lottery's Set For Life already knows what he's going to do with his cheque: Buy a new set of false teeth. James Hanlon opted for a lump sum rather than $1,000 a week for 25 years. He'll be taking home an impressive $675,000. The handyman also says he has no plans to retire.

TIME FOR ANOTHER FOOTLOOSE REMAKE

Apparently the town of Taber, Alta. has never heard of the Charter of Rights. Its city council recently passed a bylaw that bans swearing in public, which brings a fine of up to $250. Kids and teens must now abide by an 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew. And officers now have the discretion to break up assemblies of three or more people in public spaces. Kevin Bacon, we need you up here!

Making a fairy tale come true

Interview. Building Cinderella's glass slipper was a formidable task, even for an Oscar-winning costume designer

"How do you do a glass shoe?"

It sounds like a question from an age-old nursery rhyme, but was actually a real problem for Sandy Powell, the Academy Awardwinning costume designer of the new live-action version of Cinderella.

Powell, whose Oscars for Shakespeare in Love, The Aviator and The Young Victoria decorate her mantle, gave me a sneak peek at the unique shoes given to Cinderella (played by Downton Abbey's Lily James) by her Fairy Godmother months in advance of this weekend's opening.

"The glass slipper had nothing to do with any shoemakers because it is made of crystal," Powell explained.

Working with Swarovski, she designed the shoe, complete with a six-inch heel and 221 facets with their light-reflecting Crystal Blue Aurora Borealis coating, out of solid crystal.

"No one can actually put their foot in that," she says

"It's a prop. In effect I was designing a prop that gets held and gets tried on but for her (to walk in) we made another shoe that was the same shape, in leather, that she could wear and then the visual effects (transformed it to) the glass on her foot.

"The glass shoe was the biggest challenge to do.

"How do you do a glass shoe that doesn't look ugly and huge?

"Hopefully I have done it. It had to sparkle. And rather than it be made up of lots of little crystals, I thought it would be brilliant if we could make it out of one piece of crystal. We didn't know if that would be possible.

"We spoke to Swarovski very early on and I thought it should be like a faceted, cut piece of crystal and that's what we worked on, which took several months."

"They didn't even know if they could do it.

Eight crystal shoes were made, but in order to save time and money, there was no left or right foot, just neutral, according to Powell.

"No one is going to notice," she says. "Doing a pair would have taken twice as long and we never see two at the same time."

Working with Disney to bring Cinderella to life brings Powell full circle back to the movie that set her on her career path.

She cites the Mouse House's Mary Poppins as an early influence, adding,

"I've always been inspired by clothes and I have always loved films."

These days, 40 movies and three Oscars later, Powell is still finding plenty of passion in her work.

"I love it.

"It gives me great satisfaction," she says.

Disney gives Lily James the slipper and Downton star finesses the fit

Fairy-tale remake.

Actress dishes on how reading for the stepsister turned into her Cinderella moment

RICHARD CROUSE Metro

The glass slipper fitting on Cinderella's foot is at the core of the magic of the fairy tale. It is a plot point that cannot be removed. If you do the whole story falls apart.

Real life is different.
Lily James, star of the new Disney live-action

remake of the Brothers Grimm tale, says the Swarovski slipper she "wears" in the film didn't fit.

"That is my English humour," she says. "It didn't fit anyone. It wasn't that they just got the size wrong. It's Swarovski Crystal so it would have broken. They had to CGI it onto my foot, which was a bit of a shame."

The Downton Abbey star — she plays the rebellious Lady Rose on the hit show — is about to have her name intrinsically connected with the Disney princess, but at the audition she had her eye on another role.

"When you get the casting call for something they pick what part you're going to go for and they

First-sight butterflies

Her first day on set she shot one of the film's key scenes, the "love-at-first-sight" meeting between Cinderella and Prince Charming, played by Game of Thrones actor Richard Madden.

- "Ken said, 'How do you feel about shooting that scene first?' Richard and I didn't really know each other and Ken caught that nervous energy, that getting-to-know-you, butterflies-in-your-stomach thing."
- "He caught it on camera and I think that was smart. It kind of sets up the whole movie. It feels in that moment that Ella is very strong."

wanted me for (stepsister) Anastasia," she says. "I remember I wore this pink tie-dyed jumper that the casting director told me to burn. But I had blonde hair because of Downton and they said I should read for Ella.

"I was kind of up for playing the off-centre part; the quirkier, funnier part. I paced the corridor for about 20 minutes and the breakdown of the part that Ken (Branagh) had given me kind of struck me. It said she had a generous spirit and a generous nature and an open heart and I think because I didn't have time to over think I just went in and just read it. I think I was much better for it."

Downton fan reaction

So how will Downton Abbey fans react to seeing her familiar face as Cinderella?

- "I hope lovingly," she laughs.
- "I didn't think there were many similarities but some people have said they think are. I watched the film and in the first scene I thought, 'Oh no! I'm playing Rose.' Then thankfully I shed it."

Play adaptation. Miss Julie character drives Jessica Chastain to the edge

It was the last day of rehearsal before cameras rolled on the film Miss Julie and Jessica Chastain couldn't go on.

Getting into the mindset of the melancholic title character was taking its toll on the two-time Oscar nominee. Director Liv Ullmann decided not to make her go through rehearsal for a particularly agonizing scene involving a pet bird.

"I came into rehearsal and I was feeling really depressed and down," Chastain recalled in a telephone interview. "Liv saw that, and the incredible thing about working with a director as sensitive as she is, is then she goes, 'You know what? Let's stop.'

"That, I was very grateful

Ullmann, known as one of Swedish director Ingmar Bergman's actress muses, adapted the story from the 1888 August Strindberg play.

Chastain, 37, plays the daughter of an Anglo-Irish aristocrat who instigates an emotionally draining battle of power and intimacy with a valet named John (Colin Farrell) at their estate while her father is away.

Chastain said Miss Julie is one of her favourite plays and she studied it at the Juilliard School in New York

The result is yet another critically heralded performance from Chastain, who got Oscar nominations for her supporting role in 2011's The Help and for her leading role in 2013's Zero Dark Thirty.

Miss Julie hits theatres on Friday. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tweeting redheads

This week, Twitter brought Chastain into contact with one of her favourite 1980s pop stars — fellow redhead Tiffany.

- "That was crazy," she said. "She tweeted me that she was a fan of my work, which is insane, especially since I think that's the first record I ever had.
- "I used to lip sync her songs in the mirror. I was like, 'A redhead singer!' I was all about it."

Naomi Watts says joining Divergent sequel was 'scary'

Movies. Veteran actress says a warm welcome by the young Insurgent cast calmed her fears

NED EHRBAR

Joining an established franchise the second movie in can be daunting even for the most experienced of actresses, and for Naomi Watts becoming a part of The Divergent Series: Insurgent was no exception.

"That can always be scary, the first day. When I arrived on the set, it was a little scary because this is a very well-oiled machine." Watts says. "I was just wildly impressed with how things were going and how fast they were moving and how disciplined all of these young actors were. When there's that many people, you can sometimes sense a little rivalry here, a few issues there, but they felt very connected and very collaborative."

The centre of that warm fuzziness, apparently, was series star Shailene Woodley. "I remember when I first met Shailene I was just enveloped in this giant hug," Watts recalls. "It felt so warm and just relaxed me right away."

Watts co-stars as Evelyn, estranged mother of Four (Theo James) and leader of the outcast Factionless in the dystopian future of the Divergent world, but as an actress she honestly thought her action-packed days were behind her. "I remember back in the day, when I was sort of at the very end of my ingenue days, being in King Kong and having to do quite a lot of physical stuff, making the promise to myself that I would never do that again," she says with a laugh. "But now I'm an older woman — or a much more mature woman - and I don't have to do quite what Shailene has to go through."

But while the action wasn't too involving for her — this go round, at least — there were some aspects to Evelyn that were tough to connect with, like the fact that she abandoned her son when he was very young.

"That one was very hard to reconcile," Watts admits. But we know that she was going through something that she felt was life-threatening and a great deal of abuse, and that was a survival choice that she had to make. But I couldn't imagine that anything could be so bad that my children would be left, but this is the world of storytelling."

Of course, while the Divergent franchise has been up and running already, Watts sees this as just the beginning for Evelyn. "It's a fun character because that's a complex thing to take on, the regret. But she's got drive, and she wants to fix the relationship, genuinely, I do think that," she says. "Perhaps there's something else going on as well, like she knows that both of (Woodley's and James') characters are going to help her

Bill Nighy CONTRIBUTED

Bill Nighy is excited for April in New York

Bill Nighy is a pretty busy guy. Between previews beginning Friday for Skylight, his Broadway revival costarring Carey Mulligan, and The Second Best Exotic Marigold Hotel currently in theatres, the seasoned British actor has no time to stop and watch any of his own work. Which is just fine, because he'd do almost anything to avoid something so painful.

I suppose doing theatre is a handy way around that, as no one can ask you to watch the performance. What are you looking forward to most about returning to Broadway?

I look forward to the bit where we've opened, everything went OK, it's a Sunday late afternoon, it's coming on spring — so that would make it April, sometime — and I've got Sunday night and all day and night Monday off, and we have been deemed a worthy visitor. I'm walking hopefully toward a bookshop that's still opened where there's a coffee shop nearby, and I will wander through the park and feel like I've earned my place in the city. Or, you know, maybe driving to Brooklyn for dessert, which I did on many occasions last time I was in New York.

Any place in particular?

There's a place under the bridge on other side of the river, (The Brooklyn Ice Cream Factory). It's right under the bridge. I used to go there for ice cream as my reward for everything. That was after I'd made my M&Ms stop, because you have more colours of M&Ms than we have (in the U.K.), I think.

Insurgent. Theo James' awkward Four-letter word for onscreen mom: 'Babe'

Theo James has faced a lot of acting challenges over the course of his career, but nothing comes close to what he had to contend with once Naomi Watts was cast as his mother in Insurgent, the followup to Divergent. And it's not just their 16-year age difference.

"Firstly - which is interesting because she's playing my mom — she's a bit of a babe. I had to get past that," James admits. "But no, she's really interesting in this film because she has a very different energy. She's very calculating, but at the same time she has a warmth and a kind of gentleness that almost juxtaposes what her real ambition is. It was kind of nice, that, in a way because it puts you on the back foot not only as the audience but as the character when you're doing the scenes with her. She's not staring you down in a kind of abrasive way. It's very loving and sweet but intense at the same time."

You can't keep a good fighter down

Interview. Ex boxer Evander Holyfield holds no punches as he talks about his rise and fall and rise again in the world of professional sport

colin.mcneil@metronews.ca

Twenty years ago, Evander Holyfield was one of the baddest (and richest) dudes to ever grace the canvas of a boxing ring. A world-class pugilist who fought his way up from poverty, 'The Real Deal' had a killer knockout punch, and a bank account to match.

Fast-forward just a few years later, and this venerable practitioner of the Sweet Science was losing the fight against a different kind of opponent: rampant, unrestrained success.

Champs, a new documentary from filmmaker Bert Marcus (How to Make Money Selling Drugs), chronicles the out-of-the-ring financial and personal struggles of prize fighting legends Holyfield, Mike Tyson and Bernard Hopkins. It's the story of how money mismanagement and personal problems left some of boxing's biggest names down for the count.

So just how do you go from being a $200-million king of the ring to broke? Metro spoke with The Real Deal to do a little verbal sparring and find out.

"I had a contract which allowed me to make $50,000 in my first (professional) fight," says Holyfield, "which was humungous because I was making $8,000 a year, with three jobs. And so here I am, a person who fought for 12 years as an amateur for free. Now I'm getting paid to do something that I love doing already."

That was just the beginning.

At the height of his career, Holyfield's biggest fights were grossing anywhere from $77 to $100 million. He reportedly earned $35 million for his rematch with Tyson (the infamous Bite Fight) alone.

"Having the money, and not knowing when to say 'no,'" he says, was the problem.

"Of course when I made all this money ... I wanted everybody to do well. I was willing to do what is necessary to help everybody." With a generous heart, deep pockets and little knowledge of finance, Holyfield's millions didn't go the distance.

"My mother said, 'Son, you cannot make nobody rich. You can give them an opportunity to be rich, but they got to do the work — or you'll go broke.'

And unfortunately, you know what, that's what happened."

In 2012, Holyfield was forced to sell his 44,234-square-foot mansion and auction off some of his most prized possessions, including memorabilia from his 1984 Olympic bronze medal win, many of his championship title belts, and an array of fight-used robes and gloves.

In the end, the one thing he was able to keep, says Holyfield, was his positive attitude.

"I didn't let people change me from the attitude I had towards people.

"I had to think back to what I was brought up on and the word of God. And the only thing that I had to build my faith on was that the second half of my life would be better than my first half."

Holyfield continued to fight professionally until last year, when he officially retired at age 51. Nowadays, The Real Deal makes a living from paid speaking engagements.

What keeps him going through it all? More advice from mom:

"She said, 'Son, if you're willing to work eight hours, then you have the opportunity to be your own man for the next 16 hours. But if you don't work the eight hours, somebody else is going to be telling you what to do for the next 16 hours."

No purchase necessary. Contest open 12:01 am on March 11, 2015 to 11:59pm on March 15, 2015 to legal residents of Canada (ex QB of age of majority in their province of residence at time of entry. Mayweather vs. Pacquiao

Holyfield's take on the 'Fight of the Century'

What does the five-time heavyweight champion think about the upcoming match between Floyd Mayweather Jr. and Manny Pacquiao?

"I think it's going to be an excellent fight. I really do."

And it's likely to go the distance, he says. No knockouts. "Both the guys are clever fighters, and one of them is a defensive fighter, which is Floyd." Holyfield adds, "The fact of the matter is, I think it'll be that chess match, that ultimate chess match. Unless somebody gets careless."

Disney breaks news on Frozen sequel, next Star Wars flick

Rogue One. First film to go outside the primary Star Wars epic set to be released in 2016

The Walt Disney Co. on Thursday announced plans to make a sequel to the animated mega-hit Frozen, and revealed new details about the upcoming Star Wars reboot.

Frozen 2 had been widely expected for a film that has become a juggernaut for Disney. Since its release in November 2013, it has made nearly $1.3 billion globally at the box office, generated a massive merchandising revenue stream and won the Academy Award for best animated feature.

Disney didn't announce any details on the sequel's plot or a release date, but said directors Jennifer Lee and Chris Buck will be returning.

Disney chairman and CEO

Bob Iger also announced at the shareholder meeting that the new Star Wars film will be called Rogue One and will be directed by Gareth Edwards (Godzilla).

The script will be written by Oscar nominated Chris Weitz (About a Boy) and will feature Oscar nominated actress Felicity Jones (The Theory of Everything).

Rogue One will be the first film of the Star Wars

Franchise to explore stories outside the primary Star Wars epic. Initial filming is set to begin this summer in London. The film's projected release date is December 16, 2016. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Graphic novel. Jonathan Coulton's modern princess

What started as a project to turn Internet music sensation Jonathan Coulton's music into a graphic novel has evolved into The Princess Who Saved Herself, a children's book that offers a modern take on the princess story.

Greg Pak, a well-known comic book writer behind the feature film Robot Stories and comics such as Storm and Batanan/Superman, is working on the new children's book along with the Japanese-Canadian artist Takeshi Miyazawa (who co-created the Marvel character Amadeus Cho with Pak) and American singersongwriter Coulton.

The resulting book, according to their Kickstarter page, "reinvents the princess myth for a new generation of proactive girls."

The team has a history of Kickstarter success: Their 2013 campaign to turn some of Coulter's songs into a graphic novel took $340,270 on an initial goal of $39,000, leading them to offer their backers a digital version of The Princess Who Saved Her-

'An awesome kid'

The Princess Who Saved Herself is based on another of Coulton's songs, telling the story of "an awesome kid who lives with her pet snake and plays rock 'n roll all day to the huge annoyance of the classical guitarist witch who lives down the road. Hijinks, conflicts, and a fun reconciliation ensue, all showcasing determination, bravery, and understanding."

self as a thank you. The next step: To produce a hard copy.

The new campaign started with a goal of $15,000 (as it's already been written, drawn, coloured and lettered, they just need to cover printing costs) and had hit more than $22,000 after the first day of a 15-day campaign.

Indonesian comic book colourist Jessica Kholinne (X-Treme X-Men) and comic book letterer Simon Bowland (Marvel, Dynamite) also contributed to the book. AFP

Motherhood inspired Kelly Clarkson on new album

Interview. Pregnancy forced Clarkson to reflect on her own upbringing

Giving birth to her first child and watching her husband tend to their daughter made Kelly Clarkson realize how much her father wasn't around when she was growing up.
"I think when you hold this little human you've created, now I think I understand the depth of the loss I had not having a father figure growing up," she said in interview last week.

Clarkson, 32, and music manager Brandon Blackstock, are the parents of eight-monthold River Rose.

The Grammy known for hits like Stronger and Since U Been Gone, sings about her father on the heartfelt, revealing Piece by Piece, the title track of her new album. "And no offence to my father, you know, he is a product of his upbringing, like, I don't know what that was, but you know, I just think now that I have River, like holding her, I can't imagine walking away."

In a recent interview, the original American Idol champion talked recording and revisiting her television days.

Was it different to record music during your pregnancy?

They're just hanging out on your diaphragm, jumping up and down. But also, just like emotionally, it's different. I told my husband I want to be pregnant the next time I make an album because ... everything is enhanced ... I've just become more of an enhanced vessel for the lyric, you know?

You've lived in Nashville, Tenn., for eight years. Have you thought about recording a country album?

I've done more than thought about doing a country album, I actually started making one. I love it. I love country music. And who knows? I love big band, too. I'd love to make a complete standards album.

Do you watch your old music videos or performances?

A fan tweeted me some video, a Throwback Thursday kind of thing, and I watched it. And then I went down the YouTube vortex of watching all my Idol things. And I was like, "How did I win?" I was like so bad! I mean, every single performance. The only one I ended up liking actually was the big band one. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Q&A. Mark Duplass to speak at SXSW

Actor, filmmaker and burgeoning indie film kingpin Mark Duplass is getting quite a platform this year at SXSW as one of the keynote speakers for the film conference — and he's not going to waste the opportunity.

You're no stranger to SXSW. How is this year different?

This is the first year where I'll be staying at a hotel and not sleeping on some weird Airbnb couch three miles away from downtown, because I'm the keynote speaker and they're going to fly me in and put me up. That's a huge difference! And we have four movies going to the festival, two of which already have distribution and two of which are for sale.

Do you have an idea of how your keynote will go?

I'm working it out in my head, but I've realized that I enjoy proselytizing about the way I've made things. I find that my career trajectory just happens to be the one that most closely approximates a practical path to success for someone who is coming from nowhere - no connections, nothing - and most of the people you're speaking to who need help are nowhere. I feel like in order to give a 45-minute speech, you f-ing better have something to offer and not just talk about yourself, you know?

How do you go about finding young filmmakers to foster?

A lot of it is pretty gut-oriented. There's a bit of a profile of that person between the age of 25 and 32 who's made a short or two, or ... has written a book or their Twitter account shows me that their storytelling acumen or something in them makes them unique. NED EHRBAR

Movies. Julie Andrews proud of Gaga

Julie Andrews says she's always been a fan of Lady Gaga, but after seeing the pop star per-form a medley of songs from The Sound of Music at the Oscars, the stage and screen icon developed a new appreciation for the singer.

"She was just belting it out of the park, and I was so pleased and so proud, and I thought she did a wonderful job," Andrews said in a recent phone interview from New York.

If Gaga had any doubts about her performance, they quickly dissipated as she was enveloped by rapturous applause — and a warm embrace from Andrews.

"I just said to her: 'You were terrific. You were marvellous," Andrews recalled of the tender

"Doing it meant a great deal to her because she says it was one of the hardest things she's ever done. She was understandably nervous, but she was so generous about it. And that's the first time I met her face-toface. I'd been a fan, and now I've found a new friend."

The Sound of Music has been rebooted in recent years for both stage and television.

But for legions of fans, Andrews' portrayal of Maria - a young nun who becomes governess to an Austrian widower's seven children - remains the definitive performance of the beloved Oscar-winning musical, which premiered in 1965. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

50th Anniversary

The movie milestone is being commemorated with the release of a new DVD and Blu-ray collector's edition.

Take it from Alanis, she oughta know,

Interview. 20 years after Jagged Little Pill, the introspective songwriter reflects on her career Alanis Morissette made her Junos debut back in 1992, wearing buoyant ringlets, a bejewelled off-the-shoulder dress, and the dumbstruck expression of a 17-year-old leaping blindly into the glare of the spotlight. She was dressed in the disguise of a dance-pop featherweight, which ultimately didn't fit.

But at least the dress did.

'Not unlike most brides around the planet, I put all my stress into what dress I would wear," Morissette recalled with a laugh recently, marvelling at the "absolutely terrifying" event.

"I just remember being really nervous and over the moon about the fact that I held eye contact with Bryan Adams for longer than one millisecond."

The award she was given that night — most promising female vocalist — turned out to be prescient. 23 years later, Morissette is being ushered into the Canadian Music Hall of Fame after a distinguished and ongoing! - career that has spanned more than 60 million albums sold, seven Grammys and 12 Junos.

Days before Morissette was to receive the honour and perform at this weekend's Juno Awards, the 40-year-old spoke about her career from her home in Brentwood, Calif.

What does this honour mean to you?

Mostly it's just me coming into the arms of Canada. I'm Canadian to the bone. To be honoured by Canadians is precious to me.

It's the 20th anniversary of Jagged Little Pill and you're adapting it into a musical. What sort of emotions does that album evoke for you?

There's a continuity there that has remained true for two decades straight, which is just social commentary, eating disorder commentary, embracing emotions, flying in the face of what's expected. So many of these themes ... seem timeless

"I swear I walk around with a whiteboard upon which people can project their hatred toward their mother and their former boss and their sister and their exairlfriend. Alanis Morissette on the isolating side of her celebrity in a way, which is lovely. It's not the kind of record that I would discourage a 15-year-old from listening to. It's quite the

You won five Junos in 1996 and in acceptance discussed how an artist's growth occurs in public. Was all the attention a lot to bear?

It was. It was a lot of pressure and I hated it. So to take some of the intensity away, I wrote Uninvited (for the City of Angels soundtrack in 1998). That was really not encouraged by my record company. They wanted me to take all that white-hot heat and put it into the followup for Jagged Little

But I was buckling under that pressure and I didn't want to write. I was super burnt-out from touring and had I not succumbed to any of the pressure, who knows, I might have been the artist who writes a record every 10 years.

So you were never infatuated with fame?

I was definitely intrigued. I was sold the same bill of goods that the planet has been sold, which is that when you're famous, you're Kumbaya-ing with Meryl Streep and Johnny Depp is petting your head while you sit around a fire (laughs). So when I entered into that whole celebrity fray, it was actually quite isolating. I swear I walk around with a whiteboard upon which people can project their hatred toward their mother and their former boss and their sister and their ex-girlfriend. It's a lot to hold.

You said making your last album (2012's Havoc and Bright Lights) was painstaking. Will you make more music? Well, right now I'm actually working on a book, which is great. Because the literary world, they're obsessed with credibility. I find as we get older, we become more and more credible, or we're perceived as credible.

(But) I'll write music until I'm dead. And maybe after, who knows? I'll channel through some young, unsuspecting artist.

Not all hall of fame inductees choose to perform. How do you think you'll feel up there?

To be honest, any excuse to be around my bandmates - I just love them so much. Ĭ have a four-year-old now (son Ever), so we're not touring at the breakneck speed we used to. This'll be really fun for us.

Alanis Morissette and twin sibling Wade were born in Ottawa. Morissette took an interest in music, songwriting and performing at an early age. At age 10, she recorded her first song, and in 1986 she joined the cast of the Canadian kids sketch comedy TV series You Can't Do That on Television.

After moving to Los Angeles, Morissette got her big breakthrough with the release of 1995's Jagged Little Pill. It was an alt-rock project of deeply personal hits. She followed it up with the equally personal but less angsty album Supposed Former Infatuation Junkie.

In the 1999 comedy film Dogma Morissette appeared as God, a role she reprised for a cameo in 2001's Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back. Her other acting credits include Sex and the City and Curb Your Enthusiasm.

Early 1990s

Morissette released her debut album, Alanis, in Canada in 1991. The dance-pop project had the single Too Hot, which reached the Top 20 on the singles chart. The next year she released another album in Canada, Now is the Time.

Morissette has since released several albums, including Under Rug Swept, So-Called Chaos, Flavors of Entanglement and Havoc and Bright Lights. She also infamously hosted the Junos in a nude body suit.

Morissette was engaged to actor Ryan Reynolds in the 2000s, but they eventually split. In 2010, she married rapper Mario (Souleye) Treadway and the same year they had their son, Ever.

Muse announce new album and tour

Drones. British rock band keeping up with previous themes of science fiction and political unease

Muse lead singer Matt Bellamy said the British rock band's seventh studio album Drones will be released on June 8, after months of hinting that new work was on the way.

"To me, drones are metaphorical psychopaths which enable psychopathic behaviour with no recourse. The world is run by drones utilizing drones to turn us all into drones," Bellamy said.

"This album explores the journey of a human, from their abandonment and loss of hope, to their indoctrination by the system to be a human drone, to their eventual defection from their oppressors."

A new track, Psycho, will be released on YouTube on Thursday, followed by the release of the album's first single Dead Inside on March 23.

The band is to play a series of live shows across Britain in March, followed by a tour that will pass through countries including Germany, Russia and France.

Hailing from Devon in England, the band's signature fusion of genres has found considerable success over a 21-year career, and the group composed the official song of the London Olympics

Previous hits include anthems Time is Running Out and Supermassive Hole, and the band had sold over 20 million albums worldwide. AFP

Talk show host Rodner Figueroa was fired from Univision after saying that Michelle Obama looks like someone from the cast of Planet of the Apes.

Figueroa, who's known for his biting fashion commentary, made his remarks during a live segment of the show El Gordo y la Flaca in which the hosts were commenting on a viral video that shows a makeup artist transforming himself into different celebrities, including Michelle Obama.

"Well, watch out, you know that Michelle Obama looks like she's from the cast of Planet of the Apes, the movie," Figueroa, 42, said with a giggle.

When hostess Lili Estefan countered with "What are you saying?" and host Raul de Molina said Obama was very atractive, Figueroa defended his remark, saying "but it is true."

In a statement, Univision called Figueroa's comments

Publisher says Terry Pratchett dead at age 66

Books. The fantasy author battled a rare form of early onset Alzheimer's disease Fantasy writer Terry Pratchett, creator of the exuberant, satirical Discworld series and author of more than 70 books, has died. He was 66.

Pratchett had earned wide respect in Britain and beyond with his dignified campaign for the right of critically ill patients to choose assisted suicide.

Transworld Publishers said Pratchett died Thursday at his home, "with his cat sleeping on his bed surrounded by his family." The firm said he died of natural causes, from a chest infection combined with the worsening effects of his dementia.

Transworld's managing director Larry Finlay said "the world has lost one of its brightest, sharpest minds."

Prime Minister David Cameron said "his books fired the imagination of millions and he fearlessly campaigned for dementia awareness."

Pratchett's ability to write and speak had deteriorated in recent years as the disease progressed. But with his characteristic black fedora and neatly trimmed white beard he remained a familiar figure in the public eye.

Transworld said Pratchett completed his final book, The Shepherd's Crown, in the summer of 2014. It is due to be published later this year.

Pratchett was best known for Discworld, a series of more than 40 comic novels set in a teeming fantasy world.

The Discworld series began in 1983 with the publication of The Colour of Magic and became more popular over time as the imaginary world Pratchett created became more detailed and complex.

Discworld grew into a series of 40 interconnected books—set on a giant disc balanced on the back of four elephants—that mixed folklore, and mischievous fun into an ebullient saga that satirized both the fantasy genre and real-life power and politics.

He sold more than 65 million books worldwide, and his novels have been translated into several dozen languages. During the 1990s, he was Britain's bestselling author—even tually surpassed by J.K. Rowling. Pratchett disclosed his medAn interesting life the condition didn't seem to be immediately life-threatening.

"Frankly, I would prefer it if people kept things cheerful," he said.

As he lost the ability to write on a computer, he turned to a dictation system that allowed him to keep producing fictional works, his agent Colin Smythe said. "It may have changed his prose style slightly," Smythe said. "The real problem is the difficulty of revising it."

Pratchett was born and raised in the town of Beaconsfield, northwest of London. He described himself as a nondescript student who attended a technical high school because he felt woodwork would be more interesting than Latin. He was also interested in radios and computers.

Treat your taste buds throughout Dining Week

Downtown Edmonton restaurants offering special meal experiences over the next 10 days

It doesn't get much better for your taste buds than Edmonton's Downtown Dining Week, with 10 days of culinary creativity in fabulous restaurants, led by talented and inspired chefs.

Created by the Downtown Business Association (DBA) in 2004, Downtown Dining Week has become an eagerly awaited celebration for food lovers and restaurants alike, according to DBA marketing manager Katherine Hoy.

"Dining Week gets bigger and better every year. This year we have a record 34 restaurants, and seven of them are joining us for the first time," says Hoy. "Our goals are to draw food lovers to participating downtown restaurants through unique, specially priced multi- course meals; create a buzz around the amazing restaurants in the core; and to rightly brand downtown as 'the dining district' of Edmonton."

Food lovers look forward to this event

IUST THE FACTS

- Downtown Dining Week runs March 13 to 22 at various downtown restaurants.
- · Restaurateurs serve multi- course meals that save consumers at least 10 per cent over their regular à la carte
- Lunch includes a minimum of two courses and costs $15. Dinners are a minimum of three courses and cost $28 because it lets them try different restaurants and experience new dishes and tastes, Hoy says.

It's a hit with chefs, too. "Many chefs use dining week as an opportunity to experiment with new flavours, combinations and menus. For example, in 2014, The Harvest room served a delicious ostrich dish. This year, Zinc is offering Alberta pork, head to hock — served four

As Dining Week grows, so does its popularity. "Even before our website went live, people were tweeting in anticipation about where to dine. For many this is a celebratory event. Everyone loves food, and this is a good excuse to bond with friends and family over a fabulous meal."

How does Hoy suggest getting the most out of Dining Week? "Make reservations, pace yourself, and enjoy the delicious food. Worry about your diet on Monday."

Appreciating Guinness

LIQUID ASSETS therealwineguy

Sometimes you take a sip of something, most often when you're just exploring your palate preferences, and carry that experience with you for the rest of your life.

Ireland's Guinness is one of those somethings.

Polarizing to a fault, Guinness comes across black and brooding when you take your first sip. It's only after a few pints that you gain an appreciation for its creamy, dark brown goodness.

As the official tipple of St. Patrick's Day, gallons of the stuff with be drunk on March 17.

If you're still leery of all it has to offer, try the Guinness Pub Draught (4 x 440 ml, $11.99 - $12.75).

It uses a bladder system inside its bottles and cans to simulate a fresh-from-thetap pour that I guarantee will erase any negative memories of your first time with the brew.

Spring calls for a change of greenery

Houseplants. Lowmaintenance, affordable. and definitely worth the trouble, plants can be a vibrant decor element

In homes where space and time are precious, the future of the humble houseplant may depend on whether it can earn its keep.

Houseplants that endure tend to be either undemanding succulents, edible herbs, or plants that add enough to a room's ambiance that they're worth some extra effort. And a huge variety of plants are both easy and worth the minimal effort, say plant lovers Tara Heibel and Tassy de Give.

Rooted in Design

Their new book, Rooted in Design (Ten Speed Press, 2015), demonstrates that houseplants can be a beautiful and creative element in a home's decor.

Houseplants connect the city dweller to the natural world and remind us of that symbiotic relationship, write Heibel and de Give, founders of Sprout Home, an indoor landscaping store in Chicago, Ill. and Brooklyn, N.Y.

"A room filled with plants can be calming and inspira-tional as well as incredibly personal and expressive. Even aloe, a common household plant, can exude complexity and style when displayed creatively," they Dividing the home into sectors — wall, ledge, floor, air, table, kitchen and terrariums (including some for aquatic plants) — the authors suggest ways to present and care for a variety of indoor greenery.

"It's easy to get pigeonholed into certain ideas about plants — that they always have to be in a certain kind of container or always be on a shelf or on the floor - and you have to help people break out of that. Many people now have a really small living environment and think they don't have room for plants, but hanging plants on a wall doesn't take up any space at all, and it adds a lot to the decor," Heibel says.

Upcycled containers

Unlike many other glossy design books, this one shows images of what look like actual, lived-in homes — several photos include cats — with some startling yet down-toearth upcycling suggestions for plant containers, including mason jars, decorative cookie tins, and even glass electric-meter boxes and unused table lamps (with a cascading plant where a lamp shade might have been).

Old picture frames become stunning displays of maintenance-free dried moss (step-by-step instructions with full-colour images included), and pieces of driftwood are dramatic mounts for ferns. Helped along by a few small nails or hooks, philodendron and bougainvillea can be trained to grow across an indoor wall, dramatically spanning anywhere from five to 25 feet.

Macramé plant hangers and terrariums, features from a generation ago, are back, but with a more contemporary feel.

"Our macramé is cleaner, more streamlined and more contemporary-looking," says Heibel. "And the terrariums have much more use of graphic material and colour and texture and shape."

The book's final section, The Roots, gives a plant-byplant glossary of possibilities, with troubleshooting suggestions.

A plant that's hard to kill

"The most frequent question we're asked is to recommend a plant that's hard to kill," Heibel said. "That definition differs from person to person. Maybe one person goes out of town for a month and another waters too much. People often don't really think about care and maintenance before putting Houseplants can be practical, too, serving as walls or screens, or providing soothing aromas. Well-chosen plants can be considered an alternative to cut flowers, or viewed as tiny works of art.

Trays of miniature succulents in various shapes, colours and textures "can be irresistibly small and sweet and inexpensive. like candy," Heibel said.

a grand indoor landscaping plan together. We want to make sure that what you're planting lives."

Two common misperceptions about houseplants, the authors say, is that they all require roughly the same care (they don't) and that they'll always look like they do when first purchased.

"You might look at a young fern in a shop and think it's perfect, but you need to know that ferns grow and you'll need to do some pruning," Heibel says. "And people buy a succulent that's cute and small, but then it grows a really long stalk or does other funny things. That's actually part of the beauty of it, but it sometimes comes as a surprise."

NHL. Edmonton erases a four-goal deficit but give up two late markers to Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh Penguins spent 21 minutes building a massive lead over the Edmonton Oilers and the next 30 doing their best to give it away.

Poor backchecking. Spotty decision-making. The details that have been a hallmark during Pittsburgh's recent surge vanished. On Thursday

Penguins

Steve Downie and Patric Hornqvist restored order just in time, scoring just over a minute apart late in the third period to help the Penguins avoid an embarrassing collapse with a 6-4 win on Thursday night.

Downie's 12th goal of the season on a rebound at 14:38 put Pittsburgh back in front after the Penguins let a fourgoal advantage slip away. Hornqvist doubled it 1:06 later with a snap shot from the left circle to help the Penguins win for the seventh time in nine games.

Brandon Sutter scored twice for Pittsburgh. Sidney Crosby added his 23rd goal of the season and finished with three points. David Perron netted his 11th since coming to Pittsburgh from Edmonton in January and added an assist.

Marc-Andre Fleury stopped 25 shots

Anton Lander, Jordan Eberle, Benoit Pouliot and Derek Roy scored for the Oilers, who have lost six straight. Yet the blowout that appeared in the offing when Crosby made it 4-0 just 1:01 into the second never materialized.

"We got better as the game went on," Edmonton coach Todd Nelson said. "We battled back. We never quit, and against a team like that we can take something away from this game." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ferrell throws wrench into spring training

Telling everyone "I'm a five-tool guy," Will Ferrell was off on his barnstorming tour Thursday through five Arizona spring training games.

The star of Anchorman: The Legend of Ron Burgundy, Elf and many other movies started in an Oakland Athletics uniform in the early afternoon, then was off to four other ballparks, with the aim of playing for each team, and at each position along the way.

And it was all for a good cause, he said.

Before his odyssey began, Ferrell told a radio interviewer that he expected to raise $1 million to be used for college scholarships for cancer survivors. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Riddle carves up halfpipe for gold

Freestyle skiing.

B.C.'s Sharpe wins women's event for first World Cup victory

Cassie Sharpe won her first career World Cup women's halfpipe event Thursday and Canadian teammate Mike Riddle took top spot in the men's competition.

Riddle, from Edmonton, captured the men's gold with 95.00 points. Americans David Wise (94.20) and Alex Ferreira (87.40) took silver and bronze, respectively.

"I actually landed all three runs, which for me is kind of rare," Riddle said. "That was probably my favourite part of the night. But my goal tonight was just to go out and put my run down.

"It took me three tries so I'm definitely loving the threerun format in the World Cups this year. Everyone skied so (well) and I'm unbelievably happy to come out on top.'

It was Riddle's first podium appearance since winning silver last year at the Sochi Olympics.

Sharpe, from Comox, B.C., finished first with a score of 93.80. Ayana Onozuka of Japan was second at 90.40 while

Brita Sigourney was third at Sharpe said she was pleased just to make it into the finals against such a strong field.

"That in itself was something so big for me to accomplish," she said on a conference call. "I could not be happier with my result for this contest." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

↑ Aries

March 21 - April 20

The universe is pointing you in a particular direction and if you are smart you will go that way. Being an Aries you are as likely to go in the opposite direction just to be different.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

What you expect to happen today and over the weekend likely won't, while what you don't expect to happen likely will. So, don't make plans.

∐ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Mercury, planet of the mind, moves into the career area of your chart today and that means the more you think ahead the more success you will enjoy later in the year.

9 Cancer

June 22 - July 23 You have strong opinions about certain issues and today's events will confirm they are spot on. But don't use that as an excuse not to look at new ideas, because life never stands still.

$\mathbf{\Omega}$ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Flattery will get you everywhere today. You know the right thing to say to influence people in positions of power.

harsh others may think you are being critical for no reason.

W Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

What you say next is not as important as the way you say it. You may intend your remarks to be helpful but if your words are

📤 Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Common sense should tell you that certain methods are not working as well as they should and what happens over the next few days will confirm that.

III Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Mercury moves into the most dynamic area of your chart today, making it easy for you to make changes you want to make, as opposed to changes that others want you to make.

プ Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

What you choose to do today may annoy some but don't let that stop you. You have done plenty of things to please them in the past and now you will do something to please yourself.

り Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Others may be impressed by your self-confidence. What they don't know is that it's an act and you don't feel that confident. Mercury's change of signs today will give your self-belief a boost.

≫ Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Happiness comes from wanting what you have, not having what you want. You have more than enough to satisfy your basic needs. Be thankful.

H Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Mind planet Mercury moves into your sign today, making it so much easier to decide what it is you want and what you are willing to do to get it.
